

INFOGRAPHIC FRIDAY

Taking complex data about Australian Apprenticeships and making it easy to understand.

APPRENTICESHIP VS. UNIVERSITY

Surprisingly, tradespeople and professionals require similar skills like technical, communication, time management, adaptability, customer service, and safety skills.

Knowledge of tools and machinery, problem-solving, hand-eye coordination, attention to detail

Technical

Computer skills, software proficiency, problem-solving, critical thinking, attention to detail

Ability to listen, understand instructions, and convey information effectively

Communication

Effective writing and speaking skills, active listening, ability to articulate complex ideas

Ability to manage time efficiently, prioritise tasks, and meet deadlines

Time Management

Ability to manage time efficiently, prioritise tasks, and meet deadlines

Ability to work in different settings and adapt to changing situations

Adaptability

Ability to adapt to new technologies, work environments, and changing business environments

Ability to interact with customers, understand their needs and provide solutions

Customer Service

Ability to understand customer needs, build relationships, and provide quality customer service

Knowledge of safety procedures and regulations, ability to work safely and avoid accidents

Safety

Knowledge of safety regulations, ability to create safe work environments, and implement safety protocols